What an amazing 20 years

It's been a meandering and whimsical span of time that Heather Goldmincs' Clayworks has brought joy to everyone that has seen her creations. Whether it joyful witches, avant-garde bunnies or houses that glow no matter the season. Clayworks has a way of making you look a second or third time, of discovering some little details you had never notice years after the first time you brought it into your home.

After hundreds of pieces have been created and marking the 20th anniversary, it seems only fitting to take a look at how all this started.

For ceramic artist Heather Goldminc, inspiration flows from the natural surroundings of her Canadian West Coast home - where she experiences four impressive seasons - the freshness of spring, the heat of summer, the vibrancy of fall and the coziness of winter - the flora and the fauna plays key roles in her creations.

Where did all this artistry spring from?

The memorable moment that wound up shaping her life and career came at the age of five. One day, her mother, Duff, brought home a bag of clay which instantly captured her interest. As she recalls it, the stuff was cold, wet, gray, and musty – hardly a material to inspire a young girl. However, this raw lump of clay would soon become a reflection of her soul, dancing through her dreams until given life by her hands.

Growing up in North Vancouver, B.C., with her brothers and sisters, she was inspired by a wealth of life experiences, including being a competitive Highland dancer. Working her way through art school, Heather juggled jobs as a dance instructor and retail sales but working with clay was always part of her life. After a while, she began to sell her products to local gift stores and galleries, absolutely thrilled that her creations gave joy to so many people. For Heather, it is a tremendous privilege and a dream come true to see her work in the homes of people all over the world, touching the hearts of so many.
